3:00 PM – Featured Speaker: Dr. Jennifer Grenz, Assistant Professor, Department of Forest Resources Management, UBC.

Presentation: Relational Restoration: Reclaiming Land, Responsibility, and Reciprocity

Conservation is often framed as protection and management, creating conservation practices that may leave essential long-term human relationship out of land care. Drawing upon her Canadian National Bestselling book, “Medicine Wheel for the Planet: A Journey Toward Personal and Ecological Healing” and the principles of Indigenous Ecology, Dr. Jennifer Grenz explores how land stewardship can move beyond preservation toward relational restoration—where ecological health, cultural continuity, and governance are understood as inseparable. Grounded in examples from her restoration practice and Indigenous-led land healing research in British Columbia, she demonstrates how we can engage with deeper time, recognize shifted baselines, and support pathways that restore not only ecosystems, but the relationships that sustain them.

Bio Statement

Dr. Jennifer Grenz is an Assistant Professor and Indigenous Scholar (Nlaka’pamux, member of the Lytton First Nation) in the Department of Forest Resources Management, jointly appointed between the Faculty of Forestry and Faculty of Land and Food Systems at the University of British Columbia. The research focuses of her Indigenous Ecology Lab (www.IndigenousEcology.com) are on the application of a food systems lens to restoration ecology, and developing culturally centered, data-driven restoration interventions using Indigenous and western sciences. The lab works entirely in service to the land-healing research needs of Indigenous communities, particularly in the context of building climate resiliency and major climate event recovery. Prior to her academic appointment, Dr. Grenz was the Executive Director of the Invasive Species Council of Metro Vancouver and ran her own invasive plant management company, Greener This Side, managing invasive species for government agencies. Dr. Grenz is the author of National Bestseller, “Medicine Wheel for the Planet: A Journey Toward Personal and Ecological Healing”, a book based on her PhD dissertation published by Knopf Canada (imprint of Penguin Random House) and the University of Minnesota Press (USA).
